Their Majesties will also meet with Kenyan business leaders, civil society representatives, and academic stakeholders to reinforce people-to-people connections between the two nations. 4. The Royal Couple will also undertake field visits to various initiatives exemplifying the longstanding Dutch-Kenyan partnership in sustainable development and cultural events celebrating the shared values and heritage of both countries. The Royal Couple will depart for The Netherlands on the 20th March, 2025.

The Royal Couple's historic visit builds on a rich history of friendly relations, aiming to reinforce collaboration and shared goals of prosperity, sustainability, and global cooperation. It must be emphasised that this is the first State Visit that Kenya is hosting this year and it is symbolic of the relations that have existed between the people of Kenya and the Netherlands.

The Kenya-Dutch relations date back to 1906 when the first Dutch nationals arrived in Kenya, establishing roots in Uasin Gishu County. Formal diplomatic ties were subsequently established in the early 1970s.

Among the projects The Netherlands Government has invested in Kenya include the Lake Turkana Wind Power which remains the largest windfarm in Africa with 365 turbines generating 310MW, contributing 15 per cent of Kenya's total electricity capacity. The Wind power project is located on the shores of Lake Turkana with an acreage of 20,000 hectares.

The windfarm project idea interestingly originated from a Dutch farmer living in Kenya, who recognised the powerful wind resource and great potential investment opportunity.

The Netherlands Government has also invested heavily in agricultural research and environmental projects and remains the top importer of Kenyan flowers. Kenya sends approximately a billion stems annually to world's largest auction in The Hague. These are then re-exported to the global markets. Kenya also exports coffee, tea, fruits, vegetables, fish and tobacco to the Netherlands, while importing machinery, data processing equipment, chemicals and dairy products.

The Netherlands Government also supports the Security and Rule of Law program, which seeks to promote inclusive access to justice with a focus on the vulnerable and marginalized; institutional strengthening of the Judiciary; strengthening civil society organizations as watchdogs on the implementation of the constitution, and support free and fair elections through civic education and empowerment of women to vie for elective positions. There are also joint initiatives within the dairy, horticulture and aquaculture sub-sectors aimed at enhancing Kenya's food security programs.
